Case study: Daniel's story

Scottish Football Association (SFA)

SFA deliver CashBack Achieving Goals in South Lanarkshire. It engages young people aged 10-25 in activities to divert them from antisocial behaviour.

Daniel is a social butterfly. He has epilepsy, autism, and learning difficulties, and before joining had not taken part in a holiday camp before.

He is now part of the para team at the local high school, and had the chance to participate in the project's holiday camp with mainstream participants.

"Daniel has loved the opportunities he got at camp which have helped his social skills in times where he would usually be stuck indoors!" Daniel's Dad

Daniel integrated well with his fellow participants, helping with team selection, refereeing and making new friends. His confidence visibly improved over the course of the camp. The loudest cheer of the week was when Daniel scored the winning goal in a semi-final tie on the final day.

Case study: B's story

Action for Children

Action for Children deliver CashBack Positive Changes in South Lanarkshire. It is a behavioural change, wellbeing, and inclusion service for young people aged 14-24 who are not engaged in school, offending, or at risk of being involved in the justice system.

When B joined, she had been missing school due to poor mental health. Dad wanted to find an alternative for her to gain an education in a way that would support her to manage her autism.

After starting, her confidence grew. She quickly made new friends and began taking part in group activities. She completed qualifications in wellbeing, numeracy, literacy and achieved a first aid certificate.

B had been using drugs regularly, but after learning the dangers in the programme reached out to her CAMHS worker for support.

"I enjoyed meeting new people the most."

"The programme improved BH's mental health and made it easier for her to transition to Motherwell College."

B's Dad

After completing the programme, B gained a place on a college beauty and hospitality course. She stays in contact with the team, and is enjoying college.
